1. Letter from the Secretary-General

Dear Delegates,

From the very beginning, MOSTRAMUN was never meant to be simply another conference. We wanted it to become a place filled with ambition, curiosity, and genuine human connection. A place where diplomacy feels sincere, where discussions carry meaning, and where people feel encouraged to share their voices without fear of being inexperienced or imperfect.

Because MUN has never been only about resolutions or policy debates.

It is about discovering confidence in moments where your voice shakes but you choose to speak anyway. It is about listening to perspectives different from your own and leaving the room with a broader understanding of both the world and yourself. Sometimes, the most meaningful parts of conferences are not found in formal sessions at all, but in the conversations between the people you meet, the ideas you carry with you, and the realization that growth often begins outside your comfort zone.

As Secretary-General of Mostramun'26, I would like to sincerely thank every delegate, advisor, chair, and member of our organization team whose dedication made this conference possible. MOSTRAMUN'26 is shaped by the people within it, and your presence is what gives this conference its spirit.

It is truly an honor to welcome you all to MOSTRAMUN'26, and I hope this conference becomes an experience that inspires, challenges, and stays with you long after it comes to an end.

Sincerely,
Melek Mimar
Secretary-General of MOSTRAMUN'26

2. Introduction to the committee

The Board of Peace is a constitution that defends all countries' rights and aims to solve the ongoing crisis and injustice, while defending people's rights and making them feel comfortable in their own country at first. The other main reason to be created was that the laws and justice authorities are not enough to maintain world peace. So, the Board of Peace was created by Donald J. Trump in January of 2026. The actions in Gaza led to the creation of the Board of Peace, to be created, being the best evidence of the second reason mentioned. However, the Board of Peace is only effective in situations that require power but places justice and laws in second place. Board of Peace has a main difference in here with the United Nations Security Council (UNSC), which is aiming to solve the crisis by giving first place to justice and laws and as a second option, it uses the military and machine power, while the Board of Peace gives attention to the usage of power at first place, since they criticise the authority of the laws and justice.

As mentioned, it was first assigned to handle the situation in Gaza by the UN. However, in the future, with Trump's determined decision, the board of peace got prepared and designed to maintain world peace and also criticised the UN and furthermore, defending their presence's superiority in authority over continents. Even though their speeches mock the UN by claiming that the BoP is an alternative to the UN, and also claim the BoP as an independent establishment. (which is still claimed as under the control of the UN)

The BoP has included 28 members, and a lot of them stayed in the operation that decided on the Gaza actions. There have been some tensions between Türkiye and Qatar against Israel. However, all the representatives of the BoP are aware of the fact that the establishment that they are in is not about to talk about their goods and their crisis; they have to be talking about the ways to solve the crisis in the most peaceful way. Depending on the situation, sometimes they will need to forget the background tensions to maintain the main purpose of the place that they are in: World Peace. However, there are a lot of countries that are represented in the council, and most of the last decisions are made by the president and the chairman, Donald Trump, USA, who has the authority to veto.

In summary, BoP is an establishment that is responsible for the world crisis and ongoing discomfort for all people in the world. The difference from the UN is just the way of solving it. BoP has not established the end of the UN, just to change the way of the solution and create alternatives, which causes normative pluralism in world justice.

Board of Peace (BoP) is a crisis committee focused on international conflicts, diplomacy, and global security. Unlike traditional MUN committees that mainly debate resolutions, the Board of Peace is fast-paced and action-oriented. Delegates must respond quickly to crises, negotiate with other countries, and make strategic decisions under pressure.

The committee usually deals with issues such as wars, refugee crises, terrorism, political instability, humanitarian disasters, and territorial conflicts. Throughout the session, crisis updates are introduced by the crisis staff, which can suddenly change the situation and force delegates to react immediately. Because of this dynamic structure, delegates are expected to think creatively and adapt to rapidly changing events.

In the Board of Peace, delegates may propose ceasefires, organise peacekeeping missions, create humanitarian aid operations, impose sanctions, or negotiate international agreements. The committee often operates with an open agenda system, meaning topics can evolve during debate depending on global developments and delegate actions.

The Board of Peace helps participants improve skills such as leadership, negotiation, diplomacy, public speaking, teamwork, and crisis management. It also gives students a realistic understanding of how international actors cooperate and compete during global crises.

Overall, the Board of Peace is one of the most intense and interactive crisis committees in MUN because it combines diplomacy, strategy, and rapid decision-making in a realistic international environment.

3. Introduction to Agenda Item

In the MOSTRAMUN'26, delegates will be both debating and deciding what to do to maintain world peace and human safety and comfort. They will first try to gain authority as peacekeepers, then they will try to maintain their authority by solving the world problems and the inner problems of BoP. In that way, we expect delegates to maintain their authority and keep the BoP as it should be. The committee will be starting on 1st November 2025, before the establishment of BoP and by the time the establishment of BoP is complete, the committee will follow the way that is mentioned in the Rules of Procedure

After the establishment of BoP, the delegates will start by solving the Gaza Conflict and then moving on to the solutions to make BoP, as Donald J. Trump said, "Board of Peace, could be the alternative to the United Nations." which emphasizes to make the Board of Peace approved by the continents, people and the whole world.

With all the establishment of BoP and the proof to prove that the BoP is a proper organisation for world peace, the agenda item will be changed due to their directives and updates, including the time updates, which is called Open Agenda. Open Agenda is one of the types of agendas that does not have a clear agenda and changes over time. Delegates will be updated about the ongoing updates and crisis, and then they will be given solutions to apply. In this committee, some world crises will be decided by the Crisis Team Members, and the solutions are expected from the delegates. By solving the 3 crises, the BoP will gain a reputation for doing its duties well and gaining public approval. But need to keep in mind that the opposite may happen too, the committee may not do their duties well and cause the Board of Peace to be eliminated and leave the stage to the traditional way, the United Nations.

Better to repeat, all actions will have conclusions as a return. Also needs to be fast to prevent the crisis from growing bigger and act earlier than the UN and succeed in winning against them, also getting a lot of public approval on BoP's side.

4. Timeline of events

4.1 Gaza and BoP (17 November 2025)

With Donald J. Trump's determined decision, the United Nations Security Council endorsed Trump's Comprehensive Plan to End the Gaza Conflict and as a resolution, the BoP holds the responsibilities and conclusions of the Gaza Conflict. Also, the UNSC assigned Donald J. Trump as the ruler of BoP, which basically made Trump hold all the ropes in his hand about BoP. A lot of delegates from the UNSC (United Kingdom, France, Germany) were not sure about the decision to make Trump the ruler of BoP, and so the German delegation made another charter as an opposite argument, but it did not pass. Also, some Senators, that is under the US Senate, which is one of the places that is established to rule the United States, criticised the topic of giving all the authority to one person. All of the arguments that are against failed or simply disappeared without even appearing properly. In summary, Trump got all the authority to rule the committee

Another argument is that the BoP is not about Gaza, it's about replacing and creating an alternative UN, not just assigning to take action in the Gaza Conflict. These arguments are supported by the UN's payments to the United States was creating a crisis in the court, and as a conclusion, there was pressure by the United States to pay them as soon as possible. Over that, the sudden appearance of an organisation created by Donald J. Trump made the questions grow more; some people think that all planned. Also, as the last charters' release, the roles of BoP and its accessibilities were too large for an establishment described, causing people to be confused, criticising the BoP's main duty over and over.

4.2 The Expansion of BoP (13 November 2026)

(This clause is about a future event that is about to happen)

As time passed, the Gaza Conflict came to an end and made people and politicians curious, wondering about the fate of the BoP, whether it would continue to solve the crisis as an alternative UN or obey the UN charter and dissolve into history as its duty ended. Most people are scared to have an alternative UN, since the one-personated-authority is applied in the BoP, their trust is not easy to gain as it may seem. Ruling the BoP without solving its corruption, mistakes, and missing pieces and ruling it with a one-person-authored system without gaining trust or completely removing the one-person-authored ruling system will most probably cause a lot of problems to the BoP's future and lead to its self-destruction. The documents and social media criticise these topics:

- Is it possible for BoP to make the right decision when one person has authority? If so, how?
- Don't BoP's appearance create another establishment that has the same responsibilities as the UN? Why do we need it?
- What makes BoP independent from the UN?

- What is the plan to make the BoP an establishment that is recognised by all countries and how does the BoP plan to make itself a properly working system?

To establish the BoP and make it a proper establishment for the public, these questions need to be addressed in time and get the approval of the public and recognition from all countries.

6. Rules of Procedure

The Board of Peace committee has unique procedures beyond the normal General Assembly and Crisis Committees. There are some similarities; however, they do not have the same procedure. The Semi-Moderated Caucuses will not be included in the BoP's committee flow.

6.1 Moderated Caucuses

The Moderated Caucuses are the caucuses where the delegates are getting permission from the chairboard to be added to the speaker list and debate with other delegates to consider the title of the motion. Motions are the main titles of the topic that is about to be talked about in the committee. The motion raiser will be asked if the delegate wants to be the first or the last speaker of the motion, and if the delegate prefers to be the first speaker, then the delegate gives their speech, and after the speech is given, the other delegates will be able to get permission to speak on the motion. If there is none, then the motion can be terminated by being raised by another motion. If the speaker wants to be the last speaker, the delegates are going to be able to be added to the speaker list earlier than the first one to talk on the motion title. With that way, the delegates will be able to consider and communicate with each other and consider ways to solve or debate a topic. The speaker times and total times are going to be chosen by the delegate who raised the motion, and the speaker time can be yielded to another delegate. The extension may be demanded by the chair members, and the extension's decision depends on the chair members.

6.2 Unmoderated Caucus

An Unmoderated Caucus is one of the most dynamic and important parts of a crisis committee in the Model United Nations. Unlike formal debate, where delegates speak one at a time under strict rules and time limits, an unmoderated caucus gives delegates the opportunity to move freely around the room, communicate directly with one another, negotiate alliances, and rapidly develop strategies. During this period, the committee temporarily becomes less formal, creating an environment that resembles real-life diplomatic negotiations and political manoeuvring.

In a crisis committee, unmoderated caucuses are especially significant because events can change extremely quickly. New crisis updates, military escalations, political assassinations, economic collapses, cyberattacks, or humanitarian disasters may suddenly alter the direction of debate. Delegates must therefore react immediately rather than waiting through long formal speeches. The unmoderated caucus allows participants to gather in groups, exchange information, and create fast responses to urgent situations. One of the most unique aspects of an unmoderated caucus is freedom of movement and communication. Delegates are usually allowed to stand up, walk around the committee room, approach other delegates directly, and hold private or group discussions. This creates a far more realistic diplomatic atmosphere. Countries that may appear hostile during formal debate can secretly negotiate agreements, discuss compromises, or plan coordinated actions behind the scenes. At the same time, alliances can quickly collapse if trust is broken or if crisis updates change political interests.

Another major feature of the unmoderated caucus in crisis committees is directive writing. Delegates often gather in small blocs to write directives, which are action-oriented documents used to respond to the crisis. Unlike lengthy resolutions in traditional committees, directives are usually shorter, faster, and more practical. They may involve military operations, sanctions, humanitarian aid, intelligence missions, cyber operations, diplomatic negotiations, economic actions, or emergency responses.

Because delegates can freely move and communicate during unmoderated caucuses, directive writing becomes much faster and more collaborative. A delegate may discuss strategy with allies in one corner of the room, negotiate support from neutral states in another area, and then quickly return to finalise a directive before the deadline. This fast-paced environment increases both tension and excitement inside the committee.

6.3 Tour de Table

Tour de table is one of the procedures that is in the UN General Assembly flow. Tour de table is a type of speech that is given to all delegates who are present in the committee at that moment. Its duration changes between 1 and 3 minutes per speaker. When an event happened, delegates needed to express their situation about the current situation, which seemed to the chair to be raised by a motion tour de table in the committee. Its duty is to express delegates' current situations, get some opinions from everyone and make the topic follow flawlessly and efficiently. Every delegate has to speak upon it; it cannot be passed or yielded to someone, since everybody will have enough time to talk. It may be asked of the chair members for an extension; the extension depends on the chair members' decision

6.4 Voting Procedure

The voting procedure is a cornerstone of the Board of Peace committee. The voting procedure will allow all of the delegates to choose and vote for the agenda which they want to choose and take action on it. Also, the voting procedure is a very democratic way to set an agenda in the committee. One delegate equals one vote, so That means they will debate whichever topic receives the most votes. The issues to be voted on by the delegates will be presented on the agenda through motions, and then all delegates will vote on these motions.

6.5 Directives and Crisis Committee Flow

Crisis committees are the type of committees that have a main problem on the agenda and are trying to solve the problem by using directives, which is a paper that includes writings from the delegate, and it's about what the delegate wants to do. Directives have some structures: Time, when the directive was sent and written on the top right corner of the first page of the directive; "To" stands for which department does that directives is going to be sent to, and "From" stands for who sent the directive, it can be multiple delegates or a whole committee. There are four directive types: Press Release, which you make an announcement or send a speech to the press; Info Directives, which are used to get information from the department; Personal, which is a type of directive that is sent by one person and can include every topic instead the ones that are included in Press release and Info Directives; Top Secret, that are used for the directives that are against the committee's or side's good or unethical to do and risky. To write a good and proper directive, it should answer the six questions: what, where, when, why, who and how. Each lack of information will have consequences, probably more negative than expected.

8. Types of Directives

Types of Directives

Committee Directives: In committee directives, you take actions as the whole cabinet by using the powers of the cabinet. Since these directives will affect all of the committee, it is crucial that you should work together in coordination and reach middle grounds about your ideas and every delegate in the committee must consent to the directive.

Personal Directives: In personal directives, you take actions as yourself by using your own personal powers. Since you will be using your own powers, you should consider what powers does your character have. For example, a character who is a commander can take some military actions etc.

Top Secret Directives: In top secret directives, you also take actions by using your personal powers but the difference is that the directive will not be known by anyone in your cabinet.

Press Releases: In press releases, you are addressing the people in the country by using media organs. They are crucial for controlling the public opinion so you should use them wisely.

How to Write a Good Directive

The directive below was written by us to give you an example for a good directive. It's not similar to most of the directives but a directive like this is good enough for the crisis committees.

[YOUR CABINET] 15.43

From: Quintus Fabius Maximus Verrucosus
To: All the Proconsuls and Military Officials in and near Piacenza

Every single pig in these villages will be given to military officers. Only 2 pigs will be left in each village in order for villagers to rebreed the pigs. After the pigs have been collected, they will be kept in a rural side of Piacenza in a secure barn and bred constantly. These pigs will be used against the Carthagian Elephants when the time comes. This plan will be explained in the war directive when the battle seems near. This army of pigs will be called "War Pigs".

Features of a Good Directive

- It bears a proper name: Always write your character's name and the committee on the directive. It makes life easier for everyone, and also adds another layer of professionalism to the directive.
